Whatever you have to say, my friend,
Whether witty, or grave, or gay,
Condense as much as ever you can,
And say in the readinst way;
And winterer you write of rurar afficire,
Or particular things in town,
Just take a word of friendig advice—
Boil it down.

For if you an spluffering over a page,
When a couple of lines would do,
Your butter is spread so much, you see,
That the breid bests plainly through:
So when you have a story to tell,
And would like a little renown,
To make sure of your wish, my friend,
Boil it down.

When writing an article for the press,
Whether prose or verse, just try
To utter your thoughts in the fewest word.
And let them be crisp and dry.
And when it is finished, and you suppose
It is done exactly brown.
Just look it over again, and then
Boll it lown.

For editors don't like to print An article lazily long, And the busy reader does not care For a couple of yards of song; So gather your wits in the smallest space, If you'd win the anihor's crown, And every time you write, my friend, Boll it down.
